

Rethinking Modification of the Natural World
Rachel Robison-Greene

What are some common examples of the naturalistic fallacy?

What obstacles stand in the way of humans' ability to see themselves as stewards of the planet? Are there reasons why viewing our relationship with the natural world as one of a custodian or keeper might be problematic?

What are the benefits and burdens of humans' capacity for reason in regards to our environment?