

In Colorado, The Right to Comprehensive Sex Education
Haley Thompson

The personal nature of sex education might suggest that it is a topic best left to parents to discuss. So why should the state of Colorado be involved at all? Why should the government mandate that it be taught in schools? What reason do we have to move that conversation to the classroom?

How does sex education fit with the goals of education generally?

Should students' parents have the ultimate say over primary and secondary (i.e., K-12) school curriculums? Why or why not?
